It is very important to meet the educational requirements set out in the state education standard. One of the current challenges is to educate the young generation in the national spirit, and to turn the State Education Standard into a new national curriculum, which will certainly serve to bring up a harmoniously developed generation.

The first President of the Republic of Uzbekistan Islam Karimov said in his book "High spirituality is an invincible force": Exemplary values such as respect for life, friendship and harmony, joint solution of various problems are becoming increasingly important. We know that our national traditions are important for both children and adults.

Of course, it is important to take into account the age of our students in inculcating our national traditions in their minds. Looking back on the past, the proper use of our ancestral heritage and national traditions still play an important role in the upbringing of children. In particular, schools have created textbooks for children, which today teach their children the rich heritage of our ancestors, our national traditions. Through educational disciplines, students are encouraged to apply our national traditions in their lessons, using examples of literature that reflects the age-appropriate upbringing of students. The role of educational activities in inculcating in the minds of students our national traditions is invaluable. It will give students a wide range of opportunities to develop their minds and spirituality[9].

The teacher uses a variety of scenes, cartoons, documentaries, exhibitions that reflect the upbringing in the discipline of education, providing students with both visual and personal participation. creates an opportunity for a broad formation of perceptions of our national traditions in the mind[10]. Today, we think it is appropriate to pay attention to the inculcation of national traditions in the minds of students from an early age, and even earlier. For example, the introduction of the mother goddess to the child from an early age, a variety of interesting fairy tales, songs, folklore, as well as political literature will be the basis for the study of our national traditions and inculcate them in the minds of young people. of great importance[11].

In particular, the use of folklore is a criterion for educating students in the national spirit. , create opportunities for them to be nurtured, to be brought up in the national spirit. Fairy tales are the most interesting genre for children, and it takes a great deal of skill on the part of the teacher to convey to the students the traditional methods of upbringing that underlie each fairy tale. Each story has its own unique and appropriate content, which inspires the reader to the Uzbek traditions: honesty, kindness, goodness[12].

Examples of folklore are the main source of educating young people in the national spirit, and we can see nationalism in every positive hero. In educational disciplines, students are taught not only textbooks, but also additional information, such as fairy tales, folklore, political literature, the most advanced methods of teaching. , the use of new pedagogical technologies ensures effective teaching. The development of methods of inculcating national traditions in students through educational subjects, the organization of lessons on the basis of new pedagogical technologies, ensuring social cooperation of young people, the formation of ideological perfection and activism of students[13].

New pedagogical technologies have become the main teaching process in schools today. As the use of new methods in teaching based on new pedagogical technologies has given good results in tests, games, questions and answers, competitions, conversations, the main focus in educational disciplines has been on ensuring social cooperation of young people[14].

It is easy to inculcate in students the "National Traditions", which embody the basic rules of morality in educational sciences. It is useful for the teacher to explain this through the folklore, which is the rich, immortal heritage of our ancestors, given in the textbook. The heritage of our people should be nurtured in the form of our national traditions: greeting, hospitality, kindness, respect, kindness, tradition[15]. The teacher pays special attention to the joint participation of students, their age characteristics, to pay attention to nationality in homework at the end of the lesson, to establish family cooperation in this regard, to help children. requires more attention[16].

Today's children should be brought up on the basis of the heritage of our ancestors by inculcating "national traditions" that embody the brightest examples of upbringing[17]. National traditions include all human qualities and help to bring up children in the spirit of kindness, love, friendship, loyalty, courage, bravery, honesty, truthfulness, generosity, hospitality, diligence. To what extent to inculcate them in the minds of students, to teach them, to teach the teacher high pedagogical skills, to set goals correctly, to use innovations correctly, especially in today's pedagogical process, which has become the main teaching process. requires the application of technology[18]. Today's teacher should be active in all respects, demanding, dedicated to his profession, social, as well as friendly with the child. The non-traditional teaching process, which has become the main teaching process, requires such dedication from the teacher. In this case, it is time for the teacher to move away from the traditional and organize the lesson on the basis of non-traditional[19].

Enriching the minds of students using the heritage of our ancestors through educational sciences, making students enjoy the heritage of our ancestors, educating them to be perfect people in the spirit of national traditions and national pride can be a solid foundation for the future.
